What makes Edpuzzle unique is that its editing features were designed with educators in mind, allowing them to customize the videos for specific learning progression and objectives. No matter the reason, there are several ways for accomplishing this. So, if you're tracking your health, you could log how many steps you took that day, your weight, you many glasses of water you drank and what you ate. As a formative assessment tool, Edpuzzle also comes with features that make it easier for teachers to track the progress of their students throughout the curriculum according to their scores. Photo Courtesy: PeopleImages/Getty Images To log in and start using Edpuzzle, you must first go online and register through its official website for an account. Edpuzzle's How-to-Guides on its website provides easy-to-follow tutorials to help teachers familiarize themselves with the many features of the tool. Teachers can select from the millions of video lessons already uploaded on Edpuzzle. The idea is to record your thoughts daily and, if that means doing so electronically, then you're still achieving your goal. An issue log is a place to log all issues and track the status of each one. Teachers who have registered can use the videos already edited by teachers to use instantly as lesson materials or to modify and personalize them to help them connect better with their own students. You can also upload videos that you want to use and edit for your lessons from Khan Academy, YouTube, National Geographic and other similar websites. Photo Courtesy: eclipse_images/Getty Images If teachers from the same schools have used Edpuzzle in the past, teachers who have signed up can also use the same video materials by clicking on the My School tab.
